

Ms. Gaddy received her Bachelor of Science degree in Psychology from Bowie State University and her Master of Education in School Psychology from Howard University. She is a Licensed School Psychologist in the District of Columbia.

Ms. Gaddy has served six years in education – all at General Smallwood Middle School. She currently serves as the school’s Intervention Resource Facilitator. In her position, she coordinates various programs for students, including the Extended Day program and Positive Behavior Intervention and Support (PBIS) to name a few.

Ms. Gaddy enjoys listening to all types of music, writing poetry, telling true life stories, reading (only non-fiction or analytical/higher level thinking books); making crafts (towel cakes, blankets, pillows, etc.), drawing, traveling, going to different events around the city (art shows, panel discussions, Hip Hop Theater productions, etc), spending time with family & friends, playing sports, visiting all types of restaurants with various cuisines (a Tom Sietsema fan. She is also a Dining Critic for The Washington Post.

