This Week in CCPS

This Week in Charles County Public Schools is a short news item compiled each Friday and sent via e-mail to all employees during the school year. This Week provides informational links to news items, school system accomplishments and facts, as well as upcoming events that employees might like to attend.

Hurricane stalls opening, but first day goes smoothly

School started a little late this year, but Tuesday's opening went smoothly, according to Superintendent James E. Richmond.

Charles County Public Schools (CCPS) opened the doors at all of its 35 schools on Tuesday following a one-day delay due to power outages and road closures caused by Hurricane Irene, which blew through Charles County over the weekend. The opening day closing followed an early school system closing on Aug. 23, when an earthquake sent teachers home halfway through their first day back to work.

"Teachers got off to a shaky start and students got off to a stormy start, but it is smooth sailing for the next 180 days," Westlake Principal Chrystal Benson joked after a successful first day on Tuesday.

More than 3,000 CCPS employees in the classrooms and behind the scenes welcomed nearly 26,000 students to the new school year. Among the employees are 151 new teachers. The Human Resources division is working this week to fill a few teaching vacancies caused by last-minute resignations, Sean McDonald, personnel specialist, said.

At Mary B. Neal Elementary School, staff captured the rock and roll spirit early by decorating guitars and playing rock and roll trivia during staff development last week. The activities were designed to help staff get to know each other and to develop this year's school theme, "Let's Rock and Roll into 2011-2012." Neal Principal Carol Leveillee said when the theme was chosen, "Little did we know that during the first week of 2011-2012 we'd have real rock and roll... an earthquake and a hurricane."

CCPS opened Tuesday with an enrollment around 25,500 students, a number that is slightly less than projected and missing prekindergarten and three's program students. The youngest students start on a staggered schedule after Labor Day.

Richmond and Sheriff Rex Coffey greeted Henry E. Lackey High School students on Tuesday with a message that "We Care" about safe driving. "We Care" is a four-year old safety program aimed at educating teen drivers through checkpoints in school parking lots and activities designed to help prevent teen crashes and fatalities.

source officer Kyle Evans, passed out flyers to students as they parked their cars and headed to class. The flyers challenge students to help save lives with safe driving. "Four years ago when you were in middle school and not yet old enough to drive, a series of car crashes took the lives of nine teenagers in Charles County. ... Now, as a student driver, it is your turn to choose safety," the flyer stated. School resource officers at each high school passed out flyers on opening day and will conduct spot checks in school parking lots throughout the year to ensure students are buckling up, limiting their passengers and not talking on cell phones while driving.

The new school year also brought principal changes following the appointment of six new principals and the reassignment of 12 elementary school principals.

Principal Thadine Wright, who was transferred from Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer Elementary School to J.C. Parks Elementary School, said returning to Parks, where she previously worked as a vice principal, has been heartwarming. Parents and students have welcomed her, and Wright said, "Returning to Parks, I have had many students tell me that their siblings remembered me from my time at Parks as a vice principal and how they think it is interesting that I am back as their principal. It makes me proud to be back in the community."

For most, Tuesday's opening was business as usual. At General Smallwood Middle School, new principal Kathy Perriello joined vice principals and administrators to welcome the school's 460 students at arrival time. As each bus stopped, administrators hopped on board to welcome students and let them know where to report. "We are excited to have you back," Perriello said over and over as students filed off the buses.

Richmond, who visited staff and welcomed students at several schools, said it was a great day. "Everything is running smoothly. It is as if schools never even closed for the summer," Richmond said.

Wright agreed, saying at Parks, instruction and learning started the first day. "To be honest, our staff and students have already done a great job developing positive learning communities in their classroom. We had a few e-mails and phone calls from parents saying that their students were tired this week but very happy to be back at school. That's nice to hear," Wright said.

System recognized for Relay for Life efforts

Charles County Public Schools (CCPS) staff and students were recently recognized for their participation in the 2011 Relay for Life of Charles County campaign. Of the more than $350,000 raised in Charles County, the school system contributed a total of $168,103 to the 2011 campaign. Funds were raised through 48 school-, center- or building-based teams that included more than 700 participants.

The school system also had 100 percent participation, which means that teams from each school, center and building participated in the fundraiser. The top four fundraising schools were: Westlake High School - $15,265; Piccowaxen Middle School - $10,555; William A. Diggs Elementary School - $10,215; and North Point High School - $9,673.

Each year, student teams are also invited to participate in the campaign. A team from Walter J. Mitchell Elementary School composed of 15 students in the Just Say No Club raised $8,588. A team of 11 students from T.C. Martin Elementary School raised $3,380, and a team from Benjamin Stoddert Middle School raised more than $1,600.

"We are very thankful to Mr. Richmond, Mr. Cunningham, all of the principals and the school team captains for their continued support and involvement. This certainly was a record-breaking year," said Stephanie Hubbard, community manager for the American Cancer Society's South Atlantic Division.

Additionally, Relay for Life teams from all schools and centers participated in a regional event held in June at Regency Furniture Stadium.
